Surprises Accompany Expected Results in May Primary Elections

In another primary election marked by depressingly low turnouts in most areas of the state, incumbents at all levels of state government were dealt crushing defeats, while simultaneously held special elections to fill vacant seats served as precursors to fall campaigns on May 15.

State Sen. Scott Wagner and businessman Jeff Bartos ran as a ticket, and the strategy appears to have worked, as both won their respective primaries. Wagner won with 44% over businessman Paul Mango (37%), and Allegheny County attorney Laura Ellsworth (19%). Bartos received 47% of the vote while Kathleen Coder had 22%, Diana Irey Vaughan had 18%, and Peg Luksik had 14%. Wagner and Bartos will face off against incumbent Democrat Gov. Tom Wolf, who will have a new running mate, as Braddock Mayor John Fetterman defeated incumbent Lieutenant Governor Mike Stack and three other candidates to become Governor Tom Wolf's running mate in the fall. Stack finished a dismal fourth, with only 19% of the vote, becoming the first sitting Lt. Governor to lose re-election, since second terms have been allowed. Stack had been under siege since last year, when reports of mistreatment of his staff by Stack and his wife led to his security detail being removed by Gov. Wolf.

In the other statewide primary held this month, Congressman Lou Barletta won the Republican primary for U.S. Senate over state Rep. Jim Christiana 63%-37%, and will face incumbent Democrat Senator Bob Casey. Barletta's surprisingly close vote over a lesser known and less well funded challenger despite having the endorsement of the state party and President Donald Trump, has raised concern for Republicans, in a race that was thought to be competitive going in.

In a bad night for Allegheny County incumbents, Democratic state Reps. Dom Costa and Paul Costa, and Republican state Sen. Randy Vulakovich all lost to primary challengers, from the extreme wings of their parties.

In Philadelphia, freshman State Rep. Emilio Vazquez (D-197), finished a distant third against two challengers. Vazquez won a write-in campaign in a special election to replace former Rep. Leslie Acosta in March 2017. The Democratic nominee and presumptive general election winner is Danilo Burgos, a former aide to Councilwoman Maria Quiñones-Sánchez. Vazquez has vowed to run again in 2020.

Tuesday's special elections for State House saw and Democrats Republicans essentially trade the 48th and the 178th districts, while Republicans "held serve" in a third. In 48th House district in Washington County, Republican Tim O'Neal handily defeated Democrat Clark Mitchell, 55% to 44%. The seat was formerly held by Democratic state Rep. Brandon Neuman who vacated the seat after winning a Washington County judgeship. Mitchell will have a second shot at O'Neal in November, as he won the Democratic primary. In the 178th in Bucks County, Democrat Helen Tai narrowly defeated Republican Wendi Thomas, continuing inroads made by Bucks County Democrats in the 2017 county elections. The seat had been vacated earlier this year when former Republican State Rep. Scott Petri was named to head the Philadelphia Parking Authority. Tai and Thomas will face off again in November, as the nominees for their respective parties in the General election.

Meanwhile in in the conservative Northern Tier 68th district, Republican Clint Owlett defeated Democrat Carrie Heath by a 3-to-1 margin. The seat was vacated when Rep. Matt Baker took a position with the US Department of Health and Human Services earlier this year. As in the other two races, the two candidates will meet again in November.

  - Jim Willshier, Director of Policy and Partnership for Pennsylvania Association of Community Health Centers

Minutes from the April 26, 2018, meeting were unanimously approved.

Kozak provided an Office of Medical Assistance Programs (OMAP) update focused on HealthChoices procurement, value based purchasing, and electronic visit verification (EVV). On HealthChoices procurement, she explained that on April 10 and 11 the department received the decision from Commonwealth Court reversing the department's final bid protest determinations filed by UnitedHealth and Vista Health Plan, specifically citing a section of the procurement code to cancel the request for proposal (RFP). Kozak maintained the department will be evaluating next steps over the next few months while operating in the existing HealthChoices agreement and will conduct due diligence for changes to future RFPs.

On value based purchasing, Kozak explained agreements in HealthChoices procurement moved towards value based purchasing including requirements regarding percentages of different arrangements managed care organizations (MCOs) must have and how to proceed over the next three years, with the goal eventually being 30 percent of MCO networks having value based purchasing. She asserted the department has been reaching out and holding sessions on the matter, first with commercial and Medicaid health care organizations and MCOs in February and two weeks ago with providers, which have garnered valuable feedback. Kozak indicated providers are generally in favor of moving forward with value based purchasing but had concerns with risk management data and offered constructive ideas for unified performance measures. Lastly she mentioned another forum scheduled for mid-June to target behavioral health providers, with an update on the topic coming after that.

Turning to subcommittee reports, Miller-Wilson provided an extensive update on Wednesday's meeting of the Consumer Subcommittee, which was held in Pittsburgh. He remarked on the unprecedented nature of the meeting and said the subcommittee received a lot of feedback from the many consumers who attended the meeting. He reported there is a lot of anxiety in the southwest among CHC participants and they also heard from vocal providers. He said many of the stories were "challenging", relaying while there has been a lot of talk about the success of the roll-out of CHC, many people came and shared what is not working. He lamented the vision for person-centered planning is not getting realized and, for example, said assessments taking only an hour when they should be longer or assessments are not individualized or result in systemic cutbacks. Miller-Wilson said the providers also spoke about the challenges of navigating relationships with each of the MCOs and a number said they hadn't been paid, but were not cutting off services. He reported the department has said it wants to hear about that. "It was a good session and there was a lot to process in the room," Miller-Wilson concluded, offering his belief that more such meetings will be held in the near future, especially to hear what happens after June 30.

Hess suggested the subcommittee return to Pittsburgh in September and Miller-Wilson agreed September or October would be a good time to go back. He noted DHS Secretary Teresa Miller had expressed interest in attending, and also pointed out the subcommittee did not hear from a lot of seniors, which he indicated may be due to a filtering of who is physically able to attend a public meeting. He reiterated the target is to hold another meeting in the southwest in the fall and "then the southeast we'll see what that brings."

An audience member who attended the meeting reported it was emotionally difficult but she was hopeful that promises to straighten it out will happen. She remarked the kinks need to be worked out because these are people's lives. Brookins added it is important for them to leave their desks and see what is really happening in the community. She commented it is mindboggling when they think it is working but then find out it is not working. Chairman McDaid commented on the lessons to be learned from the meeting and said it makes sense to take the subcommittees “out on the road.” The Consumer Subcommittee will next meet on June 27 in Room 129 of the Health and Welfare Building. Hess added the biggest issue is the loss of consumer choice and everyone is worried about EVV and the loss of choice around that.

Jamie Buchenauer, director of the Bureau of Fee for Service Programs, announced the Fee-for-Service Subcommittee met the second week of May and learned about updates to address opioid epidemic, including conversations on three bulletins that were released. The subcommittee also conversed on non-emergency transportation issues and made a lot of recommendations to the Managed Long Term Care Subcommittee because they have jurisdiction over the issue. She reported ambulance providers are concerned about getting payment for transporting people in nursing facilities, so that was referred to the other subcommittee. Lastly, Buchenauer reported the subcommittee heard about provider enrollment; ordering, referring and prescribing; and was updated on a new process for reviewing inpatient hospital stays. The next meeting is scheduled for August 8.

Glinka reviewed the May 10 meeting of the Managed Care Delivery System Subcommittee, which included relevant updates from OMHSAS and OMAP. He said the bulk of the conversation centered on pediatric shift nursing, which he explained can be as much as 24 hours a day. Glinka reported there has been a 69 percent increase in cases and more than 1.2 million hours of care are authorized each month, which averages out to eight hours a day for each child receiving services. He stated 73 percent of those services are skilled nursing services and discussed staff shortages, which are due in part to increased competition from other health care facilities that can offer higher wages. Glinka said 80 to 90 percent of authorized hours are covered, but 35 to 45 percent of missed hours are due to inability to staff the shifts; the rest are family refusal or deferral hospitalization, or coverage by a different agency or insurer. He said the department is moving to facilitate more regular contact to minimize missed shifts. Glinka also reported the department will plan stakeholder discussions to include MCOs and provider staff and will identify and address policies as needed. He emphasized the subcommittee will “stay plugged in on this,” concluding by noting Gateway has about 20 percent of the cases and mentioning they require a lot of very expensive care. The subcommittee will next meet on June 14.

MAAC is next scheduled to meet at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday, June 28, 2018.
